Notice concerning anti-dumping measures on products originating in the territory formerly known as the German Democratic Republic

(90/C 327/08)

On 3 October 1990, the German Democratic Republic formally became part of the Federal Republic of Germany and as a consequence became an integral part of the European Economic Community. The Commission now gives notice that since Council Regulation (EEC) No 2423/88 [1] lays down provisions for protection against dumped or subsidised imports from countries not members of the European Economic Community, it follows that the anti-dumping measures concerning the products mentioned below, and originating in the territory formerly known as the German Democratic Republic, no longer have any legal basis and are therefore without object.
